The most incredible reincarnation story in history!

THESE PEOPLE SHARED PAST LIVES — IN THE 1860s

...IN THIS TOWN!

MILLBORO, Va., during the Civil War (above), and the same view in 1982 (right).

AUTHOR Marge Rieder was astonished by her findings.

FOUR of the 14 people who recalled past lives in the same town during hypnotic regression are Maureen Williamson and Joe Nazarowski, top, and Barbara Roberts and Millie Sprouls.

By SUSAN JAMISON
Staff Writer

In one of the most spectacular reincarnation cases ever, hypnotist Marge Rieder regressed 15 people — and found they were all relatives or friends in the same town during the Civil War!

Rieder says her clients, all of whom now live in or near Lake Elsinore, Calif., recalled lives spent in the small town of Millboro, Va., and described the same people, places and events in detail.

"This is the only instance I've heard of where so many people shared relationships in the past," says Rieder, who hypnotized the first of the group in 1968.

"It's an astonishing case. I wrote a book about it because I wanted the world to know."

Rieder first hypnotized Maureen Williamson after she went to the hypnotherapist complaining of anxiety and stress.

In a trance, the 34-year-old newspaper reporter recalled being molested as a child. A few days later, she began regressing to another lifetime.

"She said, 'He's my husband,'" Rieder, 54, recalled. "She said it was the Civil War era and she was on a farm outside Millboro, Va. She said her name was Becky."

Over the next months, Rieder listened as Maureen described her past life as a farm wife who was having an adulterous affair with a Confederate soldier.

She was a woman with a husband, children and loose morals who was eventually strangled for her extramarital dalliances.

"It was shocking," says Maureen, a mother of four who accompanied Rieder on a trip to Millboro in 1987. "I thought maybe my 'memories' came from something I read somewhere, but when we went to Millboro, I knew I had been there before. I recognized the town. There was no doubt in my mind."

After scores of sessions, Maureen mentioned that she recognized other residents of Lake Elsinore when she visited her past life in a trance. Surprised, Rieder began regressing those people — and found out that they, too, remembered earlier lives in Millboro and a number of those remembered Becky.

Over the years, she found 15 people — ranging in age from 14 to 62 — who recalled other incarnations in Millboro. Only Virginia, but their recollections were clear, detailed and eerily accurate.

One, Joe Nazarowski, is a security officer in Lake Elsinore. In Millboro, more than 100 years ago, he was Charles E. Patterson, a Confederate soldier stationed in Millboro and later wounded at Shiloh. Lake Elsinore residents Barbara Roberts and Millie Sprouls recalled their lives in Millboro, too.

"Both towns are on the sites of sulphur springs, but that's the only link between them," the amazing group reincarnation is her book Mission Jo Millboro.

"I simply can't explain why all these people lived together once — and then returned in this century to live together again."

DEVIL-POSSESSED TOYS BURST INTO FLAMES!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Special correspondent

Little Peggy Malone loves her dolls, her stuffed animals and her teddy bears, but the 3-year-old may have to get rid of them all — because an unknown force makes them burst into flames whenever she leaves them alone!

The Atlanta tot can't get more than 30 feet from her toys without setting off a blaze on her toy shelf, so she either has to take dozens of cuddly playthings with her or stay in her room 24 hours a day. The situation is so bizarre that the child's mother called in a priest to exorcise the little girl's belongings.

"My daughter's toys are possessed," said frightened mom Andrea Malone, 34. "I'm convinced they're burning with the fires of hell.

"They burst into flames and they burn with a fierce, hot blaze, but when the fire goes out, there's no sign they've ever burned. Once Peggy's favorite doll caught fire and she tried to pick it up. Her little hand was badly charred, but minutes later the doll looked like normal."

Mrs. Malone, a divorced sales clerk, says the eerie happenings began right after she and her daughter moved into the four-room apartment where they now live. The mother and daughter went out for a walk one afternoon and returned to find seven of dolls and a little stuffed bear ablaze.

From then on, whenever Peggy strayed very far from her toys, they began to smoke and glow. "It's as if they are possessive about her and want her always to be with them," Mrs. Malone says. "If she goes outside to play, they all burn like torches. I have to get her and get her back in her room.

"I am so afraid that the spirits that inhabit the toys may do terrible harm to my little girl. That's why I asked the priest to exorcise them. I figure maybe he can get those demons to rest."

Priest Anthony DiPiero says he has never performed an exorcism involving toys before, but he's willing to try as long as there's no danger to the child.

"Otherwise, Mrs. Malone says she's going to have to move out of [illegible] demons," Father DiPiero said. "I hope I can help prevent them from burning to du[illegible]

Ancient Egyptian mummy has

MUMMY of the woman was found wrapped in cloth bandages. She was buried nearly 30 feet underground in an Egyptian tomb containing dried foodstuffs and artifacts.

By ROBERT ALLEN
Correspondent

Archeological experts studying the remains of a 3,000-year-old Egyptian mummy found a gleaming artificial heart stitched carefully into its chest — making it the second such mummy found since 1982!

According to reports from Cairo, the flat-sized heart appears to have been implanted in the middle-aged woman a few weeks before she died. One of the plastic valves apparently sprang a leak, causing the patient to bleed to death before the defective part could be replaced.

"It sounds farfetched, I know, but there is no other explanation for the presence of this heart in the mummified woman's chest," said an unidentified archaeologist whose preliminary report on the discovery was sent to officials in the Egyptian government.

"The heart is constructed of plastic and an unknown metal alloy and is strikingly similar to the artificial heart that is in wide use today. Equally as strange, the heart is identi-

Car crashes killing more gals than guys

Women are dying in traffic accidents at an incredibly faster rate than men, possibly because stress from job and family have driven them to drink and drive more.

From 1975 to 1990, the number of women killed in traffic accidents increased 40 percent, while the number of men who died on the nation's highways dropped about 10 percent, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

While traffic experts don't know exactly why this has happened, they indicated that stress, and how women handle this stress, could be a major reason for the increase.

Both stress and driving under the influence of alcohol contribute to accidents, studies have long shown.

The death hike is highest among women younger than 65. Girls ages 16 and 17 face the greatest risk of being killed.

Women drivers are being killed more often in accidents involving more than one vehicle, and usually during rush hours.

Affluent suburban areas also are proportionately more dangerous for women drivers than cities.

Patriotic boss gives workers $1,000 to buy U.S. autos!

Doosman Doug Brown is offering $1000 to any employee who buys or leases an American car.

Brown, the president of Brown Paper Co. in Greenwich, Conn., said that five of his 50 employees have already considered the offer. And he even got one worker to change her mind about buying an American car.

"My attitude on American cars was 'Ugh, I'll never buy American,' " Susan Thompson said. "Because I always had car trouble until I finally bought a Japanese automobile."

New pet craze — fainting goats!

The hottest new exotic pet has made a has-been of the pot-bellied pig. It's the fainting goat!

Whenever the goat gets spooked, his muscles stiffen and he keels over unconscious for 30 seconds to a minute. Then he gets up without any problems, according to the Exotic Events Journal. The goats don't have to be terrified, just a little surprised.

"Fainting goats are a popular exotic pet [now]," one more people wanting them as pets than other rare animals."

Once they were near extinction but now the goats number more than 3,000 in the U.S., according to the International Fainting Goat Association in Terril, Iowa.

The average fainter costs from $200-$700, weighs 35-50 pounds and stands 15-20 inches.

GREAT PYRAMIDS of Egypt where the historic mummy was found in a burial tomb.

artificial heart!

cal to one that was found in the chest of a mummified child that was found here in 1998.

"That pretty much proves that the ancient Egyptians were experimenting with surgical techniques and technologies that were thousands of years ahead of their time."

The latest mummy was found by German, Belgian and Egyptian archaeologists, who have spent the past 15 months excavating a series of small tombs near the Valley of the Kings.

The woman was 21 to 40 years old when she died. The body was wrapped in cloth bandages and surrounded by dried foodstuffs, ceramic figures of animals, several articles of furniture and an engraved ivory box.

Pathologists who studied the mummy found it to be well preserved, with arteries and veins intact.

In a report submitted to government officials, they concluded that "the device seems to have been implanted to replace the woman's own heart. She appeared to have been in the final stages of severe heart disease.

"It was beautifully stitched and likely worked for several weeks before a defective valve began to leak, causing the woman to bleed to death.

"This type of operation is fairly rare, even today. We are completely baffled by what we have found."

Several archaeologists are said to be considering the possibility that the ancient artificial heart was created by a previously unknown civilization very possibly one from outer space.

"For years there have been theories that aliens visited the ancient Egyptians and instructed them in science and mathematics," said Ahmed El Mansour, science writer for a Cairo daily.

"Now for the first time, some of our top archaeologists are beginning to believe these speculations.

"The artificial heart is evidence of a highly technical expertise of the kind that simply wasn't known on Earth before the advent of modern science. These scientists are stumped, they're baffled.

"They can think of no other explanation but that this medical knowledge was brought from outer space."

The scientists' explanation is reinforced by the mummy of a 5-year-old boy that was found in 1998. He also had an artificial heart in his chest cavity.

Bat attacks teenagers watching horror flick!

Unsuspecting teenagers Simon and Elke Mayner were watching a spine-chilling Dracula movie on TV when their home was invaded by a nightmarish visitor — a huge, hideous black bat!

While the shrieking critter darted back and forth across their living room, the brother and sister from Schwarzhirt, Germany clung to each other in terror, fearing the horror in the screen had somehow crept into their home.

"We got the shock of our lives," said still-trembling Elke, 16. "We've never been so scared."

The petrified pair finally reached a telephone and called cops, who arrived just in time to see the bat wing its way out an open window.

Hubby buries wife — at her favorite restaurant!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Anguished over the sudden death of his beloved wife Esther, Harold Burnett carried out one final act of love and devotion — he secretly buried her only a few yards from her favorite restaurant!

After Esther had died in her sleep, the penniless, 69-year-old former actor wrapped her lifeless body in a blanket, lifted it in his pickup truck and drove to the place she had enjoyed so much in life, her favorite restaurant in Calverton, Long Island, N.Y.

There, just off a dirt road and within sight of the restaurant, heartbroken Harold dug a grave and placed his wife in what he thought would be her final resting place.

But months later, Esther's brother in Chicago called police asking them to look into his sister's disappearance.

Suffolk County detectives questioned Harold and learned the tragic details of her death and burial.

"We approached the husband and he told us she had died in her sleep of natural causes in their home," Det. Lt. John Gierasch said.

With no money and no nearby relatives to turn to for help, Harold, in a statement to police, said he decided to bury her himself.

Esther's body was exhumed and an autopsy was conducted.

After a four-month investigation, Harold was cleared of any wrongdoing in connection with her death. But he is charged with improper disposal of a body, a misdemeanor. If convicted, he could be sentenced to up to a year in jail.

"It's a rather sad story all around," Assistant D.A. John Collins said. "What motivated him or what caused him to go ahead in the manner he did, is very hard to say."

On a happier note, at the time of her death, Esther was a secretary in a Manhattan bank. Harold had notified the bank of his wife's passing, but didn't ask about any benefits that might be due her.

Esther finally did get a proper burial — paid for with the benefits she was entitled to all along.

Cruel cartoon has Eskimos on warpath!

By EARL MONROE
Correspondent

A band of 99 Eskimos has literally gone on the warpath over a Far Side comic strip that shows a grinning polar bear eating an igloo while commenting: "Oh, boy! I just love these things!...Crunchy on the outside and a chewy center!"

That's the word from Canadian anthropologist Jennifer Comstock, who says that the primitive but proud people have vowed to take their protest to President George Bush in Washington, D.C., if that's what it takes to get an apology.

"To be perfectly frank about it, they're mad as hell," said Dr. Comstock, who was visiting the Eskimos at their camp west of Bathhurst Inlet in north central Canada when a fur trader stupidly showed them the comic.

"These people have never been known for their sense of humor," she continued, "and they certainly don't see anything funny about a polar bear calling them 'chewy.'

"As far as they're concerned the comic cheapens their heritage and makes fun of their way of life.

"And they've made it clear that they're going to get satisfaction — or else."

The Toronto-based scientist said the Eskimos got their hands on Gary Larson's Far Side comic the first week in February and have been furious ever since. The one-panel strip appears in hundreds of newspapers worldwide and is known for its twisted and often dark commentary on subjects of all kinds.

The particular comic that infuriated the Eskimos is a take-off on a classic commercial that touted the goodness of a candy that has a crunchy outside and chewy inside. And as the comic clearly intended to suggest, an igloo would have those same candy-like characteristics if there was an Eskimo sleeping inside.

"Most people see the humor in the comic but the Eskimos see like they've been hit with a brick," said Dr. Comstock. "And far from being ignorant and isolated, these people know enough about government and politics to take their case all the way to the top.

"They couldn't care less about confronting the author of the strip or any of the newspapers that published it. To their way of thinking, the United States of America has insulted the Eskimo people.

"And they're not going to be satisfied until President Bush personally issues an apology — even if they have to travel to Washington to get it."

The White House refused to say whether or not Bush will issue the apology that the Eskimos want so badly.

Dr. Comstock says Eskimos are relatively patient people, however, and will likely wait six to eight weeks before they converge on Washington to demand a meeting with the President on his own turf.

"I'm not sure what they'll do at that point," said the expert. "If they don't have what they want by then, they could become violent."

Dr. COMSTOCK

They're hoppin' mad and they want an apology — from Prez Bush himself!

Fed-up hubby dumps pizza-crazed wife

She ordered pepperoni pies for breakfast, lunch and dinner every day for a whole year!

PIZZA junkie Phyllis Winkler got one taste of pepperoni pizza and from then on she just couldn't get enough of that wonderful stuff. She had pizza delivery men at the door three times a day, seven days a week.

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Hapless hubby Elvin Winkler walked out on his weirdo wife Phyllis after 15 years of marriage — because the flaky lady was so hooked on pepperoni pizzas she had 'em delivered to their home for breakfast, lunch and dinner!

"I've got nothing against pizzas, but my God, Phyllis had them brought to our house for every single meal last year — and I mean every single meal," groaned fed-up Elvin, 41.

"It got so bad that after awhile she didn't have to call the pizza place — they'd call her and ask her what time she wanted the next one delivered.

"Finally I said that's it. I'm outta here. I work my butt off to make a living and I deserve a nice home-cooked meal once in a while."

The ratzinl rooster's tale of woe began in November 1991, shortly after he and his mama moved from Mississippi to Houston, Tex.

"We met a nice couple from down the street one day and that night they invited us over for a little game of cards," Elvin told a reporter. "I remember about halfway through the evening, everybody was kind of hungry so the lady ordered a out to the sticks in Mississippi and we'd never had a pizza or anything else delivered to our house like that. Fact is, I don't think Phyllis had ever even tasted pizza before.

"And boy, I could see her eyes get big when the kid showed up with that thing steamin' hot and ready to eat."

And when hillbilly Phyllis chomped into all that meat and pepperoni, she was sure she'd died and gone to heaven.

"Phyllis ate half that damn thing by herself and when we went to bed that night she kept on talking about that pizza," said her flustered hubby.

And 10 minutes after answering Elvin got home from work the next night, the pizza man was banging on his door — delivering the jumbo pepperoni and extra cheese his elated lady had ordered for dinner.

"It wasn't long before she was ordering out for pizza every damn night," fumed exasperated Elvin. "Then it wasn't too long before she was having a pizza delivered for breakfast, another for lunch and another one delivered for dinner."

pastures. And now he's planning to file for divorce.

"We had exactly 1,095 pizzas delivered to our house in 1991. That's one for every breakfast, lunch and supper that entire year — including Thanksgiving and Christmas," fumed Elvin.

"I had pepperoni coming out my ears, so finally I packed up and left. It may sound funny to people who've never been there, but it's not. Living with a pizza junkie can be pure hell."

Horn player rescues mom-to-be in labor

...blows up her flat tire — with his mouth!

A long-winded trumpet player became a knight in shining armor for a pregnant woman about to have her baby when he inflated the flat tire on her car — using nothing more than his own incredible lung power!

MUSICIAN Freddie Stansbaugh shows how he used his amazing lung power.

Though gasping from his Herculean effort, biker Freddie Stansbaugh then leaped behind the wheel of mother-to-be Sue McFadyen's car and made a mad dash to the hospital.

"Thank God the tire only had a slow leak," the heroic musician said.

"We made it just in the nick of time."

Freddie was cruising his motorcycle along a country road outside St. Louis, Missouri, when he saw the stranded female behind the wheel of her car, clutching her swollen belly in obvious pain.

"I could see she was pregnant, so I stopped. She said she was in labor and had tried to get to the hospital but wasn't able to steer the car.

"It was easy to see why. The right front tire was flat as a pancake.

"I found it had been punctured by a piece of wire. I told her I'd change it, but when I opened the trunk, there wasn't a spare tire.

"Well, I didn't know what to do. But she was really getting frantic.

"She said she knew the baby was on its way and she was crying and begging me to help her.

"Man! I was getting as frantic as her. Then I realized there was only one thing I could do — try to blow air back into the tire with my mouth.

"I'm a jazz trumpeter. Been blowing a horn ever since I was a freshman in high school and I've got a great pair of lungs. I knew this was going to be the toughest solo performance of my life, but I had to try."

Freddie said he loosened the tire's valve stem and started blowing like he'd never done before. Incredibly, the tire began to inflate.

"Between every gust, I pressed my tongue over the stem to keep the air in while I inhaled," he explained. "It was just like tonguing a trumpet mouthpiece. When the tire had enough air to roll, I screwed the valve stem back in as fast as I could.

"I had some air, but the tire was still inflated enough to get her to the hospital. She had her baby less than five minutes after we got there."

Freddie stayed at the hospital until Sue's husband got there to be with her.

"They were both really grateful," Freddie said. In fact, their baby is a girl and they named her Frederica.

"That's really nice. But I'm no hero. I'm just a trumpet player who used his lungs to help a friend in need."

NEW KIDS ON THE CHOPPING BLOCK!

The New Kids on the Block are moving in to Milli Vanilli neighborhood -- the country's highest paid entertainers stand accused of lip-synching their way to fame and fortune.

To make matters worse, the Kids' recent attempt to sing for themselves [illegible] Hall's show was a disaster.

The Kids hoped that appearance would lay to rest the controversy.

"As far as we're concerned, it's over," said Donnie Wahlberg. "We're not saying we sing great, but we sing."

That's what he thinks. "Harmonies were off and notes were missed on several occasions," one listener complained.

Even fervent fans of the Kids were furious at the so-called pseudo singers. One ex-Block head is suing them for fraud, claiming the Kids didn't sing much on any of their hits.

That was the third lawsuit filed against the chart-clunked group in the same week! An ex-music producer for the Kids who has filed a suit against [illegible] is suing the hip-hoppers for using her snapshots of them without her permission.

"It's become a cottage industry to sue the New Kids," said their mouthpiece Leonard Levin, who promptly filed a countersuit to protect the Kids' reputation. "The statements are so far from the truth. It's ridiculous," Leonard said.

Maybe so, but teenyboppers who once worshiped the Kids are astonished at how bad their actual voices really sound.

How to stop a Don Juan from breaking your heart!

A Don Juan will whisper sweet nothings in your ear one day and break your heart the next — but it's easy to spot these phony Romeos, says a top psychiatrist.

"At some point in their lives, many level-headed women fall prey to the irresistible charms of a Don Juan — the male counterpart of the femme fatale," said psychiatrist Dr. William Appleton.

Here are his tips on how to spot a smooth-moving Don Juan:

● He makes you feel special.

"A Don Juan is a real ego builder. He tells each of his women that she's the 'ideal' he has been seeking."

● He gives himself exhilarating appeal.

"He depicts himself as leading an exciting, out-of-the-ordinary life. He talks about exotic places and daring adventures."

● He "tunes in" to your every thought and mood.

"He's totally attentive. He's almost psychic in his ability to anticipate your wants and needs. like ordering you a drink before you even ask."

● He's never at a loss for words.

"He's a polished performer with faultless manners. He's lavish with compliments and knows just what to say."

● He makes you feel needed.

"He reverts to a woman's mothering mode — usually by admitting to some minor, uninjured weakness."

● He's a sexual Santa Claus.

"He's more intent upon giving than receiving sexual pleasure."

Once you recognize a Don Juan, "get rid of him before he dumps you," Dr. Appleton warns.

"Refuse to let this man monopolize your time.

"Don't fall into the trap of centering your entire life around someone who will one day abandon you."

Woman yanks out all her teeth — to cure bad breath!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Frantic housewife Carla Collens had her teeth pulled out to cure her horrible bad breath — then found out that the halitosis was all in her mind and there was nothing wrong with her breath at all!

"I can't believe that I'll have to wear false teeth for the rest of my life all because of a terrible misunderstanding," said Mrs. Collens, a Winston-Salem, N.C., mother of three. "My dentist went along with it — he yanked out every one of my teeth.

"I felt like the inside of my mouth was rotting and that I must be giving off the most foul bad breath.

"But now they tell me there was no halitosis at all. They say I just got over-anxious about my breath and convinced myself I had a problem."

...and then finds out her halitosis was all in her MIND!

The woman's bizarre impatience came to light when she consulted a team of specialists, complaining that she still had bad breath even after the removal of all her teeth.

The specialists smiled her extensively but found no trace of halitosis.

Mrs. Collens says she first began fearing she had terrible breath when her youngest daughter complained about it one morning in 1991.

From then on she brushed her teeth up to 12 times a day, desperately trying to freshen up her breath.

"But it seemed to me the more I brushed, the worse my halitosis got," she told her dentists.

"I tried every kind of tooth paste, every kind of mouth wash. I brushed my teeth, my tongue and my gums. I changed my diet. I took vitamins — but to me it seemed my breath only got worse."

Finally, the distressed welfare mom went to a dentist's clinic and convinced a dentist to yank out all her teeth.

After the drastic operation she says she felt that her problems diminished for a while.

But a few weeks later she began to fear once again that her breath stank.

It was only when she consulted specialists a gum disease that she learned her problem was mental, not physical. The woman is now going to see a counselor once a week to work out her fears and she is being fitted for a set of false teeth, her dentists report. The specialists warned that bad breath phobias like hers are becoming more common because of toothpaste and mouthwash advertising designed to make people fear halitosis.

Frightful mom Carla Collens will have to be fitted for a set of false teeth after having all her choppers pulled Touchy Injuns are ruining our American sports!

I'm madder than a buffalo with Geronimo on its tail over all this hullabaloo about sports teams with Indian nicknames.

Seems a bunch of renegade Indians have organized heap big powwows across America to protest using team names like Redskins, Braves, Seminoles, Blackhawks, Chiefs and Eagles.

And not only that, for crying out loud, but the country's wimpiest newspaper has kowtowed to these feathered fanatics and promised not to use Indian names of teams anymore. Some rag out of Portland called the Oregonian must have one hell of a lot of Indian readers to drop coverage of the Super Bowl if the Redskins happen to show up again.

TOP INDIAN Russell Means, right, and the American Indian Movement, lead the Cleveland Indians in 1982 over the team's logo, above.

And just how do these idiots in charge of the paper propose protecting the World Series if the Cleveland Indians win the Pennant?

I want to ask him what the sports editor will do if Chicago Blackhawks make a run at the Stanley Cup?

But what makes me so just plumb crazy is how a few Indians think they have the right to change the great American tradition of naming sports teams after them.

Let's face it. If we had let the Indian wars we'd have baseball teams with names like the Boston Micks after the Irishmen there. The New York Jews, Philadelphia Krauts and the Atlanta Kikes.

ED ANGER INDIAN POLL

Yes ☐

I agree with Ed that most Indians are assholes to get so heap big upset about sports nicknames, like Redskins, Chiefs and Seminoles, and ought to shut up about it.

No ☐

Indians should be able to change the name of any team like the Chiefs or Braves. The noble Redskins have been made fun of too long for the sake of a stupid game.

Send your vote to Ed Anger Indian Poll, The Mobile Register, 304 S Dauphin Street, Mobile, Ala. 36602

The teams named by Indian tribes

If this makes me the only newspaper in Oregon to be disgusted sensitive to Indians, why don't they just stop naming American sports and run canoe races and bow and arrow contests on the front page?

So read my smoke signals! So grunting on to these hilly Redskins. And I'm not talking Washington, either.

Girl kills dad for feeding her goldfish to the cat!

By SHAWN REENA
Staff writer

A teenage schoolgirl stabbed her father to death and left him in a pool of blood — because he fed her pet goldfish to the cat.

During her trial, the 15-year-old told how she and her brothers and sisters watched in horror as her cruel dad grabbed the pet fish, Lizzie, and dangled it over the cat's mouth before dropping it in.

As he stood there laughing sadistically, the furious teenager grabbed a butcher knife and stabbed him several times, she told a judge in Crown Court in Newcastle upon Tyne, England.

"You'll never bother us again!" the girl screamed as she rammed an enormous kitchen knife into his gut nine times.

But it was a fatal threat to her dad's heart that sent him reeling to the floor two doors, according to police records.

The girl whose name cannot be used for legal reasons, was arrested and charged with the murder of her father.

The court was told that the girl had suffered years of abuse by her dad. She admitted to manslaughter but pleaded not guilty to the murder charge.

Judge Justice Turner gave her three years' probation.

He also ordered that she receive psychiatric treatment to help her deal with the years of torment at the hands of the sadistic father.

Turner said the case that she escaped tougher punishment because she had been subjected to "emotional tensions that no young person should be subjected to, or could be expected to cope with."

"It would be difficult not to feel sympathy," he added.

Police dog sniffs out sneezing kid

A dog that usually sniffs out drugs was called in when a frantic mom couldn't find her 3-year-old daughter — and the pooch found her snuggled up in bed under the covers.

"I couldn't find my kid for 10 minutes. She and absolutely disappeared," said James Lamar of Miami, Fla.

Convinced her daughter Jessica had been abducted, the worried mom called cops, who brought along their drug-sniffing dog, Crack. He quickly found the little girl in bed.

An overzealous cop ticketed an irate mom Jacqueline Prast for recklessly driving her daughter's baby buggy!

Officer Jean L'Hermit accused the 24-year-old woman of endangering a minor after he saw her pushing the buggy in a dog sled fashion on a sidewalk in Antwerp, Belgium.

Incredible photo of tourist being eaten by ZOO lions!

She tumbled [illegible] cage — and became their [illegible]!

By MICKEY MacDUFF / Newspaper Syndicate

As dozens of tourists watched in horror, a 23-year-old teacher was savagely mauled by three lions at an animal park in Africa — but her incredible courage in the face of death enabled her to live to tell of her chilling ordeal!

Janice Gruber, a grade-school teacher from Munich, lost her footing while trying to retrieve her camera and toppled into a lion holding pen in the Masai Mara Game Preserve in Kenya.

"I didn't know how many lions had attacked me," Janice said from her bed in Nairobi People's Hospital. "But I knew it was more than one. I could feel their fangs ripping into me in different parts of my body.

"The pain was worse than anything I had ever known in my life. I knew I was going to die. I just prayed that it wouldn't take long.

"I had been wearing a bathing suit and shorts when I fell. I was told later that the lions had ripped them to shreds and that I was naked when I was finally pulled out of the pen. But by then, there wasn't much to see except blood and torn flesh.

"The only important thing is that I'm still alive. It's been 18 days since it happened, but I can still hear the lions growling. I can still smell their foul breath. And I can still feel their fangs crunching into my body.

"They chewed off my left foot and four fingers on my left hand. And I lost most of my right ear. The rest of my body is covered with bite punctures and claw scratches. But there's no permanent damage. The doctors say I'll be able to walk again with the help of an artificial foot.

"The lions were finally driven off by the park rangers, who fired their rifles into the air. But they were afraid to shoot directly at the lions for fear of killing me.

"I'm very lucky to be alive. I'll never forget the sound of those lions growling and tearing at my flesh. I'll never forget the pain. And I'll never forget the fear I felt when I realized that I was going to be eaten alive by those beasts.

"I'll never go on safari again. I'll never even go to the zoo again. I've had enough of wild animals to last me a lifetime."

Janice's ordeal began when she and her husband, Hans, a 28-year-old engineer, were on safari in the Masai Mara Game Preserve. They had been driving for several hours when they came upon a pride of lions lazing in the sun.

"We were all on the observation deck about 50 feet above the lion pen," one witness explained. "The girl dropped her camera over the rail and she made a lunge to grab it. She just fell a cartwheel over the fence and fell into the pen.

"When she fell, I thought she was dead because she didn't move a muscle. In my mind I said, 'What a horrible way to die.'

"Yet she's alive! I can hardly believe it!"

Hans, who was also on the observation deck, quickly realized that his wife was in danger. He ran to the park rangers and told them that Janice had fallen into the lion pen.

The rangers, who were unarmed, were afraid to enter the pen for fear of angering the lions. Instead, they fired their rifles into the air to frighten the lions away from Janice.

Hans then ran to the edge of the pen and began shouting to his wife. He told her that the lions were afraid of her and that she should not run away from them.

Janice remembered a magazine article she had read about a man who survived a bear attack in Alaska by pretending to be dead.

"The man said that by faking death, the bear no longer considered him a threat and stopped chewing on him. The man was very badly torn up. But like me, he's still alive.

"I remembered that story and I knew what I had to do to live. The pain was incredible. My whole body was in agony.

"I wanted to scream and kick out at that beast, but I knew the moment I did, my life was over. Somehow I bit back the pain and made it through. Finally the park rangers told me that the lions had left the area.

"I lay there for what seemed like hours. I was afraid to move. I was afraid to open my eyes. I was afraid to breathe.

"Finally I heard the park rangers shouting to me. They told me that the lions had left the area and that I was safe. I opened my eyes and saw that the lions were gone. I was alive!"

Park rangers then entered the pen and carried Janice to safety.

"We were afraid to shoot at the lions for fear of killing the girl," one ranger explained. "We had to wait for the lions to leave her alone before we could enter the pen."

Janice was rushed to the hospital where she underwent surgery to repair the damage done by the lions' fangs. She is expected to make a full recovery.

"I'm very grateful to be alive," Janice said. "I'm very grateful to my husband and to the park rangers who saved my life. I'm very grateful to God."

Janice and Hans plan to return to Munich in two weeks.

[illegible] couple beaten to pulp by Devil [illegible]

A well-to-do couple were ambushed in a woods by knifed Satan worshipers, who tried to kill the trespassers for "messing up" their treasured shrine to the Devil.

Myrtis Whitten was brutally beaten and tied to a tree and her husband, Bobby, was shot in the abdomen by two beady men in the bizarre attack on the couple's land near Citronelle, Ala. "The Whittens weren't supposed to come out of that woods alive," a sheriff's spokesman said. "Mrs. Whitten had received threatening phone calls earlier from people who called themselves disciples of the Devil."

A few weeks before the assault, Mrs. Whitten had discovered candles, incense, blood and animal fur on a hunting stand on their property.

"She removed some of the objects and cleaned up the stand. That apparently angered the Satan followers who had been using the stand for their nighttime worship services. They got their revenge," said a deputy.

On the afternoon of the attack, the well-known couple were several hundred yards from each other hunting deer in a remote area of their land.

"Mrs. Whitten had just shot a deer and shouted the good news to her husband," sheriff's dep. Walter Davis said. "As she climbed down from the elevated deer hunting stand, Mrs. Whitten was grabbed by two men wearing gloves and hoods over their heads."

The screaming woman was beaten severely about the face and stomach, and tied to a tree. Whitten ran to his wife's aid, but was gunned down by one of the masked men.

Though bleeding badly from the stomach wound, the heroic hubby was able to assist his wife who drove him to a hospital.

Deputies said the two masked men escaped and have not been caught.

Whitten was on the hospital's critical list, but has since been released.

Stunned farmer comes face-to-face with . . .

THE PANSY FROM PLANET X

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Special correspondent

Four farm families in an isolated country region have sighted a creature from outer space they describe as green-skinned, 7 feet tall — and a prissy, prancing pansy!

The gay alien is believed to be the same creature that terrorized a peasant in El Pichon, Argentina, about three years ago.

Whimsana say he likes to make love to male humans, then bursts into tears when his advances are rejected.

"He's strange enough in the way he looks," said space-story sighter Manuelo Canteru of Cordoba, Argentina. "But the way he acts is outrageous. He swishes his hips around and minces like a gal. He picks flowers and sniffs them like he's disgusting."

According to Canteru, 31, and other witnesses, the alien has been spotted by four families in a 30-square-mile area usually at night. He has pale green skin, huge eyes and a large mouth. His hands are thin and rubbery and he has big feet like oars. He wears a silver jumpsuit over silver and red striped tights, a thick layer of makeup and shiny boots.

The cosmic queen has been spotted looking longingly through broken locks of houses, where he tries on women's jewelry, clothing and high heels. When confronted by males, he flutters his eyes and uses mental telepathy to make sweet talk.

"I found him wearing my wife's dress and putting on her perfume," Canteru said. "I couldn't believe my eyes.

"He sort of scrubbed up to me, raving about how good-looking I was. When I grabbed him, he squirmed and screamed and told me he loves strong, dominant men. When I pushed him away, he began to whimper and sob and then he jumped off into the night in my wife's high heels."

Canteru says the latest sightings took place in January and February and since then there has been no sign of the space swish. That's okay with him, the station farmer says.

"Meeting that thing has to be the weirdest experience of my life and I don't want to repeat it," said the father of three. "As far as I'm concerned

Dear Furious in Marin: I'm young enough to be Madonna but old enough to know better!

Dear Confused in Detroit: I don't know what your boyfriend says — a 10-year old woman didn't get pregnant!

Dear Lover in Airline Miles: Money may not buy you love but it takes care of everything else!

Dotti will answer your letters — and tell it like it is, too! Write to her, c/o Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

Dear Dotti: My boyfriend and I get along okay but one thing really bothers me. Whenever we're out in public he makes me tell everybody that I'm a neighbor of his because I'm homely and he doesn't want anyone to know we have a relationship.

When we're at home he actually makes me put a paper bag over my head before we make love because, as he puts it, "I don't like getting intimate with a mad freak." Is this normal for a guy to act this way, Dotti? Should I go along with this or do ugly girls like me deserve something better? — Carmen in Wilmington

Dear Curious: Your boyfriend is a rat and if you've got any self-respect at all you'll ditch him pronto. Homely is only skin deep, but what of the mind you've made sure he can't see that. It's up to you to find someone who can!

My husband's stinky feet are driving me up the wall!

Dear Dotti: I'm at the end of my rope and need help fast. My husband of five months is driving me up the wall with his stinky feet. Now I know that a lot of men out there have the same problem but my Jeff is king of them all. It's not normal odor, but more of a pungent, spicy kind of smell. It's enough to make you vomit. I've nagged and nagged him about it, begged him to see a doctor about it, even threatened to leave him if he won't listen. In fact, the more I say the more he makes a point of kicking off his shoes and stinking me out. What should I do? — Disgusted in Detroit

Dear Disgusted: If you really want your husband to wash his rotten feet and quit to smell a little better — and cut the boys off if he's any kind of man at all he'll immediately see the error of his ways and do whatever you say for the rest of his life!

How can I show my parents that you are the greatest?

Dear Dotti: I've been reading your column for more than three years now and as far as I'm concerned you're the greatest. Unfortunately, my parents disagree with me and say I'm ruining my brain by taking your advice to heart. What can I do to convince them that you really know what you're talking about? And if it's not too much trouble, could you please send me a big picture of your beautiful face? — Admirer in Crestline

Dear Admirer: I'm reluctant to call your parents a couple of pinheads but there'd ground be hard to explain why you write here with such keen intelligence. Just keep reading my columns and tell your parents about it. Sooner or later they'll come around. I personally guarantee it!

Taking a cruise was the best thing I've ever done!

Dear Dotti: You recently said anybody who takes ocean cruises is brain dead and I couldn't disagree more. I'll have you know that I took a seven-day cruise through the Caribbean and I had a fabulous time. It was worth every penny I spent and if I ever have the opportunity to take another cruise I'll jump at the chance. So why don't you just keep your fat trap shut, Dotti? You don't know what you're talking about. — Angry in Montana

Dear Angry: The next time you take one of those stupid cruises do me a favor and fall off the boat!

Mom buries herself — and her 2 kids — alive!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Distraught wife Maria Ortiz followed her beloved husband to the grave by burying herself alive with his corpse — and she took her two young children with her!

The woman's desperate act was discovered more than a week after the burial in Victoria, Tamaulipas. And though authorities managed to rescue the mother and children from the crypt where Manuel Ortiz lay, they were too late to save them. After a touching funeral, the three were returned to the crypt two days later.

"It's tragic, tragic," sobbed Angelina Morado, sister of the dead woman. "My poor little nieces died a terrible death."

According to Mrs. Morado, the couple had been sweethearts since they were in their early teens and were married in 1982. Their children — Lupita, 7, and Soledad, 4 — were the center of their lives.

Manuel, 31, worked as a tile setter and his wife devoted herself to her home and family. Then last August the young father was diagnosed with a deadly skin cancer. Maria was destroyed by the news, relatives say.

"She said from the beginning that she couldn't live without Manuel," Mrs. Morado recalled. "She said she wanted to join him in death. We'd say to her, 'What would the children do without you?' But she didn't listen to anyone."

When Manuel died this January, Maria pretended to be resigned to life without him. But she plotted to keep her family together even in death.

After her husband was buried, she returned with her little girls to the cemetery. She unlocked the family crypt and entered it with her daughters, shutting the heavy door behind her.

"There was no way to open the door once it slammed shut," Mrs. Morado said.

"She buried herself alive. She took the little girls so they wouldn't be alone."

Captured dolphin has HUMAN ARMS!

Netted off California, creature communicates in sign language!

By KENT STONE
Special Correspondent

A dolphin with human arms and hands has been netted off the California coast!

And while scientists have yet to figure out what caused the creature to sprout limbs instead of flippers, they say it is extremely intelligent and has actually begun to communicate with them in a primitive form of sign language.

By MAYUDA

Having been in captivity less than a month, the dolphin has yet to tell its captors anything of importance.

But marine biologist Dr. Mayuda expects the creature to improve its communications skills as time goes on and eventually talk with researchers in great detail.

"This is the scientific discovery of this decade," declared Dr. Mayuda, one of 14 experts now studying the dolphin at a marine laboratory in Tokyo.

"This creature is truly a freak of evolution, and judging from the fact that it has arms and hands instead of flippers and fins it is almost certainly [illegible] between animals and humans for the first time ever."

The capture of the dolphin reportedly came as a shock to the Mayuda-led research team that accidentally netted the creature while studying marine life a few hundred miles west of California in the Pacific Ocean.

In fact, Mayuda said that he and his colleagues thought that they had caught a child's toy float until the dolphin cut loose with a barrage of chattering and head-shaking when they approached.

"We were also totally stunned," continued the expert. "I recall one of our deck hands asking, 'What the hell is that?' and I didn't know what to tell him.

"Fortunately our vessel was equipped with a large tank that enabled us to keep the dolphin aboard because it was so shook and without the proper facilities it would have died within minutes.

"As it worked out, the dolphin survived and is quite happy in Tokyo. We've even been able to teach it to say a few words in sign language so it can tell us when it is hungry, when it is feeling well and when it is tired or bored.

"As the dolphin's sighting vocabulary increases it should be able to tell us where it came from, if there are other dolphins like it and much more about all the creatures of the sea.

"I know it sounds like sci-fi fiction but we can see for real," Mayuda and his team plan to release the creature when they complete their studies but they are reluctant to say just when that might be.

Meanwhile, they insist that the dolphin is both healthy and happy in its new environment — and learning to sign new words every day.

"This is unimaginably exciting research," said the expert. "I feel privileged to be a part of it."

My septic tank is haunted by my dead husband's ghost!

TEXAS widow Winnie Hankins dumped her dead hubby's ashes down the toilet — and ever since then his ghost has made her life a living hell. "I just can't get rid of him," she says.

By AUDREY [redacted] Correspondent

The ghost of Winnie Hankins' good-for-nothing future hubby now haunts the "hallowed" place she chose to scatter his ashes — the septic tank behind their rural Texas home!

"I put his ashes right where they belong — down the toilet," the resourceful Winnie declared.

"Now that worthless, lazy cuss refuses pointblank to driving me batty with his moaning, groaning and howling through the plumbing all the time!

"I don't know what he's so pooped about, anyway. He always said, 'Winnie, when I die, I want my ashes read up on the subject.' Well, that's where I kept them — on the subject of the septic tank. And as far as I'm concerned, that's too good for the likes of him.

"For 27 years he made my life a living hell. Winnie, do this and Winnie, do that. He was a lazy slob who never did anything. He just sat on his big behind all day long, sleeping down here and watching TV.

"And now that he's dead he's still making my life miserable. Every time I use the sink, flush the toilet or take a bath, I can hear him moaning and wailing through the plumbing. It's awful!

"Have you ever tried eating on the pot with someone howling under you? Well, I can tell you, it's downright upsetting."

Winnie's 68-year old hubby, Harley, died of liver failure in February. She had his body cremated and took his ashes back home to Winnie, Texas.

DESPERATE Winnie has even tried pumping out her septic tank — but that didn't work either, she says.

Weird noises began coming from the septic tank, drifting up to her through the sink, tub and toilet downpipes.

"I thought that eventually Harley would just seep out of the tank into the ground," Winnie said.

"But he stays trapped, his ghost won't leave. I think it's just staying there to make my life a misery.

"I tried everything I can think of to get rid of it .. all kinds of drain openers and cleaners.

"I had a plumber come in and snap out the pipes with a and pump out the septic tank. But that didn't work, either. As soon as I used the plumbing, there came Harley's voice wailing like a angry banshee.

"I'm not what you'd call a religious person.

"I mean, I believe in God and all that, but I don't go to church like I should.

"But I'm going to see if I can get a minister or a priest to come out here and say some prayers or something. Maybe that'll scare old Harley off.

"If that don't work, I don't know what I'll do. I can't sell this place. It's all I got.

"Besides, I know Harley

Doctors find cure for killer muscle disease

Scientists have made a major new medical breakthrough with the discovery of an incurable muscle disease-causing gene that kills young adults.

The gene is responsible for myotonic dystrophy, which usually strikes one in every 7,000 people in their early 20s.

"This discovery has profound implications for the diagnosis and eventual treatment of the disease," said Dr Michael Hayden, director of the Canadian Genetic Diseases Network.

The crippling disease eventually leads to the wasting away of voluntary muscles and patients' lives are tragically cut short.

They often die in their 30s or 40s from heart or respiratory failure.

How to feel sharp as a tack & fit as a fiddle!

You can banish fatigue by using these dynamite tips from scientists.

Fatigue makes you an entirely different person, pushing your best qualities to the background and it can turn the spotlight on your worst ones. It makes you irritable and depressed. It interferes with your ability to think and reason, warps your judgment and causes you to make poor decisions.

The quickest and most effective way to banish physical fatigue caused by hard work is to stand under a cold shower for a few moments, research at the University of California shows.

● Taking short, frequent rest periods is another way to beat fatigue. The average man can do twice as much physical work and become less tired that way.

● Do housework and other physical work to the rhythm of music and you won't be so tired.

● People who work with their brains require more sleep than those who earn their living with their muscles.

While it takes only four hours of sleep to restore physical energy, it takes twice that long to replenish energy expended in mental effort.

● To perform mental work with a minimum of fatigue, plenty of fresh air is a must.

Tests have established that to function most efficiently brain cells need a continuous and plentiful supply of oxygen. In a stuffy room, performing mental work requires more effort.

● Don't slump at your desk. The best posture to avoid mental fatigue is one that allows proper breathing so you get plenty of oxygen.

● Worry, anxiety, frustration, boredom and similar emotional attitudes drain your energy much faster than rest can replenish it ... and then you suffer chronic fatigue.

● Boredom literally makes you tired. If boredom is draining your energies you need to snap yourself out of it by cultivating new interests. Try a new hobby or take a vacation.

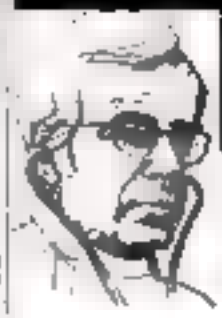
DON'T SWEAT A FEVER!



Docs say most are really good for you

Don't be fooled by all the myths and the old wives' tales about the dangers of fevers. In most of the cases, a fever is a sick person's best friend, according to experts.

Here are some common myths about "running a temperature" and the surprising truth behind them.

MYTH: Fevers can kill.

FACT: "The body will not knowingly set its thermostat at a level which is dangerous," said Dr Elisha Atkins.

"The only exception is when the body is under heavy exertion. Very high temperatures can cause brain damage and even death, but we don't call them fevers because they are not naturally regulated by the body."

"The fever is the body's response to an attack — it's not a symptom," said physiologist Dr Matthew Kluger.

MYTH: A fever should be burned out with exercise.

FACT: "That doesn't make sense at all," said Dr Atkins.

"Exercising increases your temperature above the limit your body has already set to deal with an infection," he said.

MYTH: Fevers are bad for you.

FACT: "There is evidence that fevers stimulate the natural defenses of the body against disease and infection," said Dr Kluger.

"White blood cells, which fight off infection, become more mobile when body temperature increases."

Myth: There are two kinds of fever. Hot and cold.

FACT: "At its onset, a fever usually starts with a chill, but this is the body's way of raising the temperature," said Dr. Atkins.

Cold shivers are both part of the same fever."

MYTH: You should try to "sweat" a fever.

FACT: "You should actually be using a bit more with a fever," said Dr Atkins.

"Once you have a higher temperature, your body has increased metabolic demands."

MYTH: Any rise in temperature is a fever.

FACT: "Quite often, our temperature naturally goes above the normal 98.6 degrees by a number of degrees," said Dr Kluger.

"Hot weather, saunas and strenuous exercise cause higher temperatures but they are in no way fevers."

Phony cop stops driver — then robs her

Career crook Robert Minaker pulled the wool over a woman's eyes when he rubbed her up side — while dressed as a cop.

Minaker "arrested" his victim for impaired driving, frisked her, cuffed her and dropped her off at home with a kiss and a hug, according to officials. Later, the woman realized she was missing $20 from her wallet.

Minaker, 31, was busily nabbed on that crime and 18 others ranging from forgery to thefts.

He was sentenced to 28 months in prison in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

Men missing in Devil's Triangle reappear — one year later!

Survivors sailed 12 months — on a ghost ship, says expert!

By MICHAEL TODD
Special Correspondent

Three fishermen who vanished in the Devil's Triangle reappeared a year later — one of them miraculously cured of a horrible deformity that had plagued him since childhood!

"This is one of the most intriguing cases ever to come out of the Triangle," a top French psychologist told reporters in the Bahamas.

"In my opinion these three men spent 12 months in limbo. This is no meaning to what we know it. And they brought back verifiable proof of their experience.

"In addition to the artifacts they claim to have gotten off a phantom ship that saved them from drowning when their own boat sank, there is evidence that one of them was the beneficiary of a remarkable operation to rebuild his face and chest, which were severely burned years ago when he was a child."

The psychologist identified the fishermen as Panamanians Carlos Giraldo, 27, Jose Torres, 41, and Cicerro Moya, 45 — all of whom are now being questioned by psychologists and paranormal researchers from the United States.

The French psychologist, who declined to be identified, said: "The men told me their ordeal began when their fishing boat started taking on water during a storm.

"They were only 40 miles east of the Bahamas. But their radio wasn't working and they had no flares to attract help. What happened next sounds far-fetched — but they say an old clipper ship appeared out of a mist and took them aboard.

"At first they thought the ship was a replica of one a century ago.

"But the uniformed sailors aboard used archaic words that the Panamanians, who know modern English, could barely understand. Eerily, only one member of the ghost ship's crew dealt directly with the fishermen.

Jose Torres

Cicerro Moya

Carlos Giraldo

"The man was their captain and first mate combined. He was in command of the ship, but there were other crew members who seemed to stare right through them.

"There he took the deformed sailor to a doctor who knocked him out with a strange-looking liquid — and somehow made him whole again.

"The fishermen said they spent what they thought were the next 10 days in a dream," the psychologist said.

"Actually 12 months passed before they found themselves on a dock here in the Bahamas. They had no idea how

SPLASH!

BIZARRE Passersby cop turned this water battle between the Walshes and the Campbells on film.

VIGILANT Ossie Campbell, right, is ready for action.

Feuding neighbors battle — with squirt guns and hoses!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Battlin' businessman Bailey Walsh, his wife and kids have waged a wingding of a war with the cantankerous Campbell clan for two mind-boggling years.

But these numbskull neighbors aren't fighting with fists and bullets — they're squaring off with squirt guns, water buckets and garden hoses!

"It's absolutely the looniest thing you've ever seen," said a horrified homeowner down the street. "This is a nice middle-class neighborhood, you know, but these nut cases are out there at all hours of the day and night, screaming insults and drenching each other.

HATFIELDS: Ossie Campbell with wife Elaine and son Ilton.

"You see them lying in wait like guerrilla fighters with their buckets and hoses, trying to ambush somebody from behind a hedge or a parked car or something. And when one hits by does and the other one, it doesn't really hurt them a bit - it just gets them wet and makes them mad as hell."

The harebrained Hatfields and McCoys have been battling it to each other since that fateful day in 1990 when Ossie Campbell, 40, chased a Frisbee

Mindy Walsh, then 6, sprayed him with a hose.

"That little twat got me dripping wet," the miffed marine boss later told a reporter. "So I went over and told her dad. Hearing he'd beat her best she'd do it if she was my kid.

"But he took one look at me standing there like a drowned rat and started laughing his fool head off."

So that night, tickled-off Ossie and his family were McCOYS: Bailey and Lila Walsh, with son Jason and daughter Mindy.

wife Lila came out of their house dressed to kill — then drenched them with a hose.

"We were all shocked out for a dinner party when that jerk jumped out at us and soaked us good," recalled infuriated Bailey, 34. "The guy ruined Lila's favorite gown and she was in tears, but he didn't care."

The next day, Bailey hid in his car with a kingsize bucket of water and doused the entire Campbell clan — Ossie, his wife Elaine and son Ilton, 8.

The water warriors have been spraying each other ever since, but say the feud will never result in bloodshed.

"I hate 'em, but I don't hate 'em THAT much," said Missionary Bailey. "We don't want to hurt them — just get 'em so wet they pack up and leave."

TEACHER FIRED FOR STEAMY SEX LESSON IN GEOGRAPHY CLASS

SEX FIEND: teacher Krystal Gail Allen threatened her eighth grade students if they intimated, say cops.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Dozens of angry parents want to tan the hide of a pretty young teacher who has been fired for turning her eighth grade geography class into a seminar on sex.

"I don't want an apology from that woman. I want her arrested," said hopping mad mum Juanita Lopez.

Cops say 36 parents have signed complaints against Krystal Gail Allen, 19, who used graphic words to describe her sexual exploits and invited the youngsters to share their sexual experiences with classmates.

"From what the parents tell us, Miss Allen didn't leave much to the imagination," said Sheriff's Capt. Tom Storrer. "The kids say she even dished with some of the boys in the class up close and sexy."

A 1990 graduate of Immoka Senior High School, Miss Allen first began substituting as an eighth grade geography teacher at Immokalee Middle School since early October.

The irate father wasn't aware his 13-year-old son was learning about sex until he asked "many unusual questions" at the dinner table one evening.

"I asked my son why he was asking. He said a teacher had brought it up in class and he wasn't sure what she meant." the dad told deputies. "I called the school to complain and found out I wasn't the only angry parent."

The young teacher was extremely clear when describing her sexual trysts, including where and how she performed sex acts, Storrer said.

"She threatened to have students kicked out of school if they snitched to anyone about the sexual overtones of the geography class," he added.

Sheriff's deputies have turned the 36 complaints over to the Collier County state attorney's office.

Miss Allen has been unavailable for comment since she was fired by the middle-school principal.

"If I talked to my own children like that, they would throw my butt in jail and that is what should happen to her." Mrs. Lopez said. "I send my children to school so they can learn good things and be good people."

Angry parents want her thrown in the slammer!

Clinic makes bizarre offer: Spin the wheel — & win a new liver!

A bizarre clinic in Monte Carlo offers dying people who can't afford an organ transplant another chance to win one at poker, roulette and slot machines.

The Dawson Medical Center is the only hospital in the world that allows its patients a chance to win their lives back through gambling.

"If you don't win, you go with your life," founder Claude Dawson told Flash's newspapers.

"These people are asked to pay the $60,000 or $70,000 for an organ transplant so they're risking their lives as a lark."

The Dawson makes an estimated $120 million of its casino. The lucrative operation allows the center to buy organs from around the world guaranteeing that new will be available whenever the patient needs it.

The center also provides state-of-the-art care including a very highly paid staff.

Winners can get the organ that they need, surgery, post-operative care and the medication they need to survive.

"It's very simple," he explained.

"Patients must have a ticket. Either back to their home and $500 to check in but they can gamble as much money as they want. They get chips for their money and the rest is just like gambling at Las Vegas — except when people win here they go home with a new life instead of a few bucks."

"To win an organ transplant, patients must rack up a certain number of jackpots. The dollar amount doesn't matter — it's the number of wins that get them the transplant. With Lady Luck on your side, you might get a new liver for only $10,000."

"Of course as in all gambling, we usually have more losers than winners."

Losers at the Dawson Medical Center are offered two days of psychiatric therapy and counseling at no extra charge. Then after a banquet and a farewell party, they are sent home with the knowledge that they tried.

"We make losing as easy as possible," Dawson said.

"We want people to feel that they were brave enough to gamble for new more

JOHN WAYNE WAS GAY!

GREAT American hero John Wayne is the latest smear by a seamy-hungry gay writer

By DICK DONOVAN / Staff writer

A simpering French fagget named Rene Dudley claims that American superhero John Wayne was gay!

The limp-wristed lollipop, who wouldn't dare open his yap if Big John was still alive, makes his sickening charge in an unpublished manuscript he shamelessly titled The Duke & I.

Not only that, but the one-time bit actor dares to utter The Duke's name in the same breath with that of tarnished actress Idol and AIDS victim Rock Hudson.

Dudley claims he romanced with Wayne began in the summer of 1949 when, in his own words, he was living with three-time gay Hudson.

"We were on location with Wayne shooting The Undefeated, the only film the two big guys ever made together," Dudley writes. "Rock just fell head over heels in love with an L.A. Rams football player. The Duke had hired us as extra hands on the flick."

Being cast aside by Rock in favor of a muscle-bound grid star left Dudley very blue and brokenhearted — until The Duke entered into the scene.

"I had never felt so low in my life, but the rest of the night I remember as if it were [illegible]. The Duke quieted my crying jag by scooping me up in his sturdy arms and carrying me to a room in the studio. That night, John Wayne made love to me the way no man ever had.

"Believe me, Rock was okay. But The Duke was the best," the star-struck guy writes.

We're not going to stand for this!

We at The Jewish World News are furious at the vicious lies in Mr. Dudley's book and are sure our readers are equally upset. If you want to voice your displeasure write to us at Duke Poll, care of Rock Canal Ave., Lompoc, Fla., 33641. We'll forward the letters to the publisher of this disgraceful book.

WORLD'S OLDEST POOCH IS 46!

Veterinarians baffled by mutt born in 1945

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

A miracle mutt named Fritzi is top contender for the title of world's oldest dog — because according to his mistress he's an incredible 46 years old!

His owner, Phoebe Caldes of New Haven, Conn., says the black and white pooch was born in November of 1945 and has been in her family for two generations. She inherited him when she was 12 years old and he's been her loyal companion ever since.

FRITZI, the miracle dog, has lived the good life, his owner says.

FATHER OF 350 hopes will celebrate his 47th birthday with a big party.

"We always fed him real good and we never let him have scraps of bones," says Phoebe. "I think that's why he's lived so long."

She's a little hard of hearing and can't always see too well, but she's still up and around, and all the kids and grandkids stop over often. And the neighbors, too, sometimes offer medicine.

The pair have been together since Fritzi was born in the same month Germany signed World War II unconditional surrender papers. [illegible]

Fritzi, the world's oldest dog, is said to have been a champion hunting dog.

In the last few years, as more and more people began to say he was the world's oldest dog, Phoebe's family began to worry that someone might try to steal Fritzi.

So they decided to keep the dog's age a secret.

Fritzi's age is confirmed by a yellowed newspaper and the vet's records.

"He was just so excited he chased the whole paper and tore it to shreds," Phoebe says. "I went to work he hadn't because now Fritzi is getting all the attention and it's hard on him."

The Guinness Book of World Records is to get his name as the oldest dog in the world. Phoebe says proudly. "He deserves to be famous."

Until Fritzi, Guinness says the oldest dog lived 29 years. The average pooch lives to be between 10 and 14 years.

Shy kids [redacted] likely to succeed, study shows

Amazing new research proves that shy kids who seem in the shadows probably will have a better shot than to succeed than the kids clogging the playground.

A timid attitude may signal personality problems in adults, but appears to be perfectly normal among children, says psychologist Lee Meyers of Texas A&M University.

Outgoing kids in the study experienced more depression, stress and anxiety than their timid classmates, some of them were more psychotic as [illegible] they were older.

Meyers hatched the idea for the study after noticing that shyness peaks at 12 to 14 year olds. Keyes linked the relation between age and shyness to hormones and social anxiety.

"Some children put on a big show, a charade to hide their shyness and convince their friends and themselves that all is well in their lives," Keyes said.

"Quite often the opposite is true. Often they have psychological problems later on," he said.

The study included 401 girls [illegible] ages 8 to 16.

ANTIQUE RADIO PLAYS 1930'S PROGRAMS LIVE — IN 1992!

Old-time broadcasts baffle the experts!

60-year-old antique Philco radio was found in the Georgia family's attic

OLD RADIO played one of President Franklin Roosevelt's famous Fireside Chats that was broadcast way back in the year 1933!

Telecommunications experts are said to be reeling over the discovery of an old-time tube radio that receives and plays broadcasts from the 1930s — live!

Private electronic engineers hired by the family that owns the old Philco table set have yet to make a report. But several sources independently confirmed that the 60-year-old receiver is in fact the focus of an "unusually intensive study" by a group of engineers.

According to one highly placed insider, the experts have tuned in and analyzed some 12 hours of programming that was broadcast nationwide in 1934, including Amos and Andy, the Rudy Vallee Show and Walter Winchell's Jergens Journal.

That doesn't include the Jack Benny Show and one of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Fireside Chats heard by the family who found the radio in their attic — and fled from the house until engineers arrived to take the radio away.

"I heard a Walter Winchell newscast and it wasn't the rebroadcast of a tape," said one engineer who requested anonymity.

"This was the real McCoy. Either that, or the finest electronic sensing equipment in America isn't worth a damn.

"We must have had half a million dollars worth of equipment stacked around that old radio. But our staff didn't pick up a thing.

away — I should say Walter Winchell blaring away — about movie stars and conditions in pre-war Europe and the Great Depression."

The set was discovered by two boys playing in the attic of their family's home in north Georgia.

Their mother, who agreed to talk about the find only if their names be kept secret, said it had belonged to her father and hadn't been plugged in since 1934.

"The boys figured it and plugged it in just to see if it still worked," she said.

"When it warmed up and [illegible] there I heard Roosevelt talking about the Depression."

GAL SHOOTS LOVER DURING SEX — WHEN A CAT JUMPS ON THE BED!

By JACK ALEXANDER, staff writer

Accused killer Nicolette Laurent said her beau might be alive today if her cat hadn't jumped in their bed while they were making love.

She had a gun in her hand and was joking with her lover, John Fernandez, when the cat bumped her hand as it jumped in the bed. The gun fired and Fernandez took a fatal bullet to the back of the head, she told cops.

Then she hid the bloody body in a storage room for two days because she didn't want to spoil her daughter's wedding, according to court testimony in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Mrs. Laurent, 41, said Fernandez had found out she had stolen nearly $1 million from her company in 1987 and had been sleeping with him so that he wouldn't tell the cops, she said.

The night of the shooting she gleefully held her husband's revolver to her head and told Fernandez he had to continue helping him to cover up her crime.

But when the cat jumped on the bed, she lunged forward and the gun went off.

Fernandez died instantly from a shot to the back of the head.

She considered reporting the shooting to police but was afraid they would put her in jail and miss out on her daughter's wedding, her lawyer said.

Instead, Mrs. Laurent testified, she covered her lover's bloody head with a garbage bag. "I was dead scared of it. I could not stand to look at him. I dragged the body into a storeroom," she said.

Already convicted of stealing nearly $1 million from her company, Mrs. Laurent told the court she isn't guilty of murder.

With her voice shaking, Mrs. Laurent said she would never Scientists focus on fibs to learn...

THE TRUTH ABOUT LYING

Science has uncovered many fascinating truths about lying. Here are just some of the questions researchers have been able to answer.

Q. What's the best way to tell whether a person is lying?

A. The best way is to listen to the person's voice, according to new university studies. Don't even look at the person's face. The strain a person in distress or her when he lies is likely to be reflected in hesitation, stammering or a noticeable change in the tone of his voice.

Q. Does lying really have a physical effect on you?

A. Yes, and the more fla grant the lying, the more se vere the physical reaction. Ly ing can lead to high blood pressure and ulcers.

Q. Is it true that if a person vows to keep a secret, he isn't likely to break it?

A. No. A psychological study conducted at the University of California determined that out of 113 subjects who vowed to keep a secret, 77 broke their promises.

The study also found that first born and only children are best at keeping secrets.

Q. Do women lie about their age more than men do?

A. No. Studies show that people in the 30 to 39 age bracket are most likely to lie about their age. Fourteen percent of the men in this group lie about how old they are — but only 10 percent of the women do.

Q. Do people who are happy with themselves, who have high self-esteem, seldom tell lies?

A. Yes. Studies by University of Texas psychologists show that lying and cheating go hand in hand with low self-esteem. It was found that when people with low self-esteem began to like themselves more, they were much less likely to act as a dishonest cheater.

Q. Is it true that the traits men dislike most in a woman are lying and deceit?

A. Yes. Psychologists at Davidson College surveyed men on the traits they most disliked in women — and deceitfulness, or insincerity, rather out at top of the list. Stubbornness ranked second.

When women were surveyed about traits they most disliked in men, they did not rank deceitfulness high up on the list.

SING YOUR WAY THROUGH SURGERY

Docs at the world's leading hospitals are making a trip to the operating room a little more fun — by performing sing-along surgery!

With a growing number of operations being done under local anesthetic, some surgeons are providing patients with headphones so they can listen to — and sing along with — their favorite tunes while doctors are slicing them up.

"That way the patient stays relaxed and the whole thing is [illegible] patient and the doctor," said renowned surgeon Dr. Hans Seidel from Berlin, Germany.

"Sometimes patients go through their operations and don't even know we've begun cutting, they've been so busy singing."

Coma man wakes to describe the afterlife

'I have seen heaven and it is beautiful'

By PEDRO MUNION
Foreign correspondent

Hard-luck laborer Javier Aller lay in a coma for two heartbreaking years, then he awoke just long enough to plead for a chance to die — so his soul can enter the gates of glory!

"Please kill me," the tragic 27-year-old begged nurses and family members gathered around his hospital bed in Barcelona, Spain.

"I have seen heaven and it is beautiful, but they won't let me in ... I am trapped outside in a terrible mist ... I can't take it anymore ... Please, please let me die."

Aller — who has been on a life support system since he was crushed by a crate of machine parts in September 1989 — lapsed into unconsciousness a few minutes later.

But the Spanish press reports that he was awake long enough to give one of them most vivid descriptions of heaven and the afterlife ever recorded.

"I was a little boy again and Aunt Maria was with me," the young man told his family.

"She led me into the tunnel of light that leads to heaven.

"And she told me, 'What you seek is the peace of eternity. And this is where we will find it.' The light grew brighter and whiter as she spoke. I covered my eyes but she pulled back my hand.

"When she did I could see that we were standing in an enormous room, like a church, and through the open ceiling the radiance of heaven and the angels and the people who have gone to heaven bathed us above like a thousand suns. For many moments we were speechless. And while we gazed in wonderment the sounds of an unearthly organ swirled around us.

"I reached out but they did not see me. My soul burned to join them but there wasn't room. They vanished in the mist and Maria whispered: 'Not now.'"

Far from comforting his family, the young man's gut-wrenching plea for death touched off a bitter feud.

His parents urged doctors to pull the plug on their son as he requested — while his grieving wife Helena threatened to sue to keep her helpless husband alive.

NOW that he's seen heaven, young victim Javier Aller has begged doctors to let him die.

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION of the remarkable journey described by Aller. "I was a little boy again and Aunt Maria was with me."

"It's been a nightmare! I'm caught between life and death," distraught father Francisco Aller told reporters. "He can see the heavenly gates but cannot get in.

"As much as we want him to live we see now that we must help end his pain."

Doctors have watered Aller's heartrich wife that he will never leave his hospital bed. "I don't care what they say," she said.

"As long as there is a single breath left in his body I will not let them murder him even in the name of heaven and mercy."

Doctors have so far refused to take sides in the dispute.

TWINS MOM — &

JUST like her daddy, Miracle tells Heather her same blonde looks as Jerry Todd, now married to her mom Stephanie.

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Special correspondent

Proud mom Stephanie Todd has a beautiful pair of twins, but the kids don't look anything alike — because they each have a different father!

Kids spitting images of their own dads!

Incredibly, the 27-year-old Houston housewife conceived one of her babies with her former husband Richard Patterson and the next day conceived the other with her current husband Jerry. Each child resembles its father in coloring, personality and body type and looks nothing like its twin.

"I was just breaking up with Richard and we had a last love-making session," Stephanie said. "The next day I felt an urge that Jerry come over to comfort me. One thing led to another and we made love, too.

"When I found out I was pregnant with twins, it never occurred to me that the babies had different dads. But when I saw them on the day they were born, I knew instantly what had happened. They're the spitting image of their fathers."

Experts say the chances of two different men fathering the same set of twins are almost one in one billion.

But it is occasionally possible with fraternal twins, they say, because in that case there are two separate eggs that could each be fertilized separately by sperm from different men.

Stephanie's 1-year-old tots — dark-haired Stuart and his blonde twin sister Heather — are physical opposites.

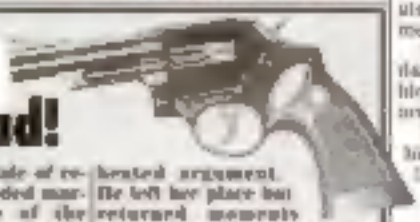
But Stuart closely resembles his dark-haired dad Richard, 31, and Heather looks just like her blond father Jerry, 28.

The two proud fathers say they've adjusted to their unusual family situation, but Stephanie's former husband Richard admits he's sometimes sad because he can't live with his little boy.

"When we decided on a divorce, Stephanie and I didn't have any children," Richard says.

"It was only after she had re-

BANG! Gal said NO to marriage proposal, so man shoots her dead!



By SHAWN DEENA
Staff writer

William Constantini took his girlfriend out to a romantic dinner and proposed to her — then shot her three times in the chest because she said no.

The 72-year old man pleaded guilty to blowing away his 52-year-old honey, Geraldine Kingman, after she destroyed his dreams of marriage.

"He handed the gun over to us and said, 'I shot my girlfriend,' " said Sgt. Thomas Mallett of the Danbury, Conn., police department.

"After dinner they went back to the apartment complex and had a heated argument. He left her place but returned moments later to finish what he started. And at some point he pulled out a .38 caliber handgun and shot her three times at point-blank range."

Constantini confessed to cops who arrived at the bloody scene and was charged with first-degree manslaughter. Because he pleaded guilty there was no

"They had been going out for some time before this and he told us he thought they were ready for marriage," Sgt. Mallett said.

"After dinner they went back to the apartment com-father. Maybe Stephanie and I could have worked something out if we'd known she was going to have my child. Now little Stuart will never have the experience of living with his own dad and I'll never know what it's like to be a fulltime father to my son. I think that's a shame, really."

The three adults have managed to work out an arrangement in which each father gets plenty of time with his child. And all three agree that the bizarre family gets along very well.

"Fortunately, Richard, Jerry and I all like each other a lot, even though my first marriage failed," Stephanie says.

"Right at the very beginning we agreed to have the babies genetically tested so we could be sure who their fathers were.

"The results proved the kids have different dads.

"Since then, we have taught the babies that Jerry is Heather's father and Richard is Stuart's. Richard visits all the time and sends me regular child support, even though he's not legally obligated to do so. It's a strange arrangement, but then this is an unusual situation.

"And things have worked out just fine for us so far."

FEWER AMERICANS ARE GETTING HIGH AT WORK

Fewer Americans are getting high on the job, new figures show.

In 1991, 8.8 percent of 2.2 million people tested came up positive, compared to 13.6 percent in 1988.

"But it is of great concern that we're seeing [illegible] coming last year," said Harry Gruenke, president of SmithKline Beecham Clinical Laboratories, which conducted the drug tests.

"And most of these people knew in advance they were going to be tested for drugs."
